Topic Sentence: The families of terminally ill patients are physically affected by their loved one's illness.

The families of terminally ill patients are physically affected by their loved one's illness. Caring for a loved one who is terminally ill can be exhausting and extremely stressful. The reason for this is that family members must give constant attention and care to terminally ill patients, who are unable to care for themselves. They must spend time with them, bathe, and feed them. If the patient can't move, they must lift them. As a result of these physical demands, family members often end up experiencing stress-related illnesses, such as anxiety, tension headaches, and digestive disorders, among others.

Topic Sentence: Notifying community residents when a sex-offender moves into their neighborhood will lead to harassment or physical harm coming to the offender.

Notifying community residents when a sex offender moves into their neighborhood will lead to harassment or physical harm coming to the offender. This is what happened in Detroit when neighbors of Will Smith, a suspected child molester, mobbed his apartment and posted signs such as "Child Molester Lives Here." When he didn't move they set fire to his house. In the end, Mr. Smith was forced to move in order to avoid future persecution. Released sex offenders are persecuted and harassed because community residents become very afraid for the safety of their kids when they learn that a released sex offender has moved into their community. If community members do not accept the released sex offender, he will never be able to live in peace, have a job, or make friends; in other words, he will never lead a normal life. To avoid the persecution of released sex offenders, they should continue to be supervised by law enforcement agencies and to receive rehabilitation treatment. Supervision and continued rehabilitation of the released sex offenders will ensure the safety of the children and the released sex offender's successful reintegration into society.
